
outlook for 2008 eyes

Posted by mirrocraft mike - 2008/02/11 07:43

Just wanted to get your thoughts on saugeye fishing this year. We caught and returned a lot of eyes last year in that 9 to 13 inch slot. Talked to many more with the same results. Did manage a few nice fish but not like years past .

Has anyone seen or heard if there are doing a shock/study this year ??

=====

Re:outlook for 2008 eyes

Posted by feller - 2008/08/17 20:30

Has anyone had any luck this year catching saugeyes and if so where and how?

=====

Re:outlook for 2008 eyes

Posted by mirrocraft mike - 2008/08/18 03:26

Been a very off year for most folks this year..Still catching a lot of 12 inchers which is a good sign for next year.(as long as they are being released) Do you know the lake?? sunken island is a good place to start..Boaters beach. point by west marina , swimming beach.... Jigs tipped with a half worm seem to produce the best But casting Spoons brings the larger eyes up..Stop in at the east marina and buy your bait..Ask for Eric I'm sure he could piont you to those areas.Maybe even direct you to a hot spot..

Give us a report back and us know how you do...

On a side note The White bass are fire right now..Just watch for them to break the surface chasing minnows.. They are everywhere.

=====